U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft
DOJ Antitrust Chief Charles A. James
The Department of Justice

Dear Messrs. Ashcroft and James:

Please see attached San Francisco Chronicle article written by Mr. Paul Bechner pertaining to the Microsoft 's anti-trust case initiated by the previous Department of Justice under Clinton Administration.

As one of millions of consumers in the world, I feel same way as Mr. Paul Bechner does about the Microsoft anti-trust case.

Mr. Bechner's article indicates how unfair and unjust the previous Department of Justice was, along with 19 states' Attorney Generals. A few rival companies are lobbying state attorneys and legislators to encourage more legal and regulatory action against Microsoft.

Microsoft is not a tobacco company. It does not harm the consumers. On the contrary, the company has consistently delivered new and innovative products at better prices to consumers and businesses.

Thank you for taking the time to read Mr. Paul Bechner's article.

Sincerely,

Francis Cheng
